CITING ELECTRONIC TEXTS: ADAPTATION OF APA STYLE

Source used for bibliographical forms is: American Psychological Association. (2010). Publication manual of the American Psychological Association (6th ed.). Washington, DC: Author. Also note the arrangement of the author's name, and initials in the following bibliographical examples. Bibliographical information can be obtained from the on-line catalog, the title page of book, or journal table of contents.

Authors using and citing internet sources should observe the following two guidelines:
1. Direct readers as closely as possible to the information being cited – whenever possible, reference specific documents rather than home or menu pages.
2. Provide addresses that currently work.

EXAMPLES OF REFERENCES TO ELECTRONIC PERIODICAL SOURCES

Abstract as secondary source

Journal article with DOI

Journal article with DOI, advance online publication

Journal article without DOI (when DOI is not available)

Journal supplement

Online magazine article

Online newspaper article
EXAMPLES OF REFERENCES TO OTHER ELECTRONIC SOURCES

Conference paper abstract retrieved online

Corporate author, government report

Corporate author, task force report filed online

Data set

Doctoral dissertation, from an institutional database

Electronic version of a print book

Entry in an online reference work

Entry in an online reference work, no author or editor

Podcast

Review of a book

Video blog post